Nasal Catarrh quickly yields to treatment by Ely's Cream Balm, which is agreeably aromatic. It is received through the nostrils, cleanses and heals the whole surface over which it diffuses itself. Druggists sell the 50c. size; Trial size by mail, 10 cents. Test it and you are sure to continue the treatment.

Announcement.

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Cream Balm in liquid form, which will be known as Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including the spraying tube is 75 cents. Druggists or by mail. The liquid form embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation.

Drying preparations simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions, which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, fumes, smokes and snuffs and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and will cure catarrh or cold in the head easily and pleasantly. A trial size will be mailed for 10 cents. All druggists sell the 50c. size. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N.Y.

The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation.

Day Dreams

By A. M. Davies Ogden

Copyright, 1904, by A. M. Davies Ogden

The late spring afternoon sunshine flooded gloriously into the bare, old studio, lighting the dreamy, sensitive face of the young man who stood by the piano pouring out his soul in melody. It flung a golden aureole around the head of the girl who, nearly lost in a big arm chair, sat absorbed.

"Adelaide, Adelaide," rang out the notes of Beethoven's passionate love song, and the girl's eyes filled with tears as the music swayed her young, untried nature. And how well Harry Walters looked when he sang!

Her thoughts, uncontrolled, wandered back to the day when they had first met, many months before. Newly arrived in Dresden, she and her father had driven out to Potschapel to inspect the big china factory; but, at her father's request for some one to show them about, the big German in charge flung up his hands.

"Aber, I spik no English," he began plaintively. Then, at sight of a passerby, his face brightened.

"Ach, Herr Walters," he cried, and the person addressed, turning, came back with lifted cap.

"Can I be of any service?" he asked in English. Mr. Hoffman looked relieved.

"I want somebody to show me about," he exclaimed, and the young man smiled.

"The Herr Direktor and I are old friends," he responded. "If I can be of any assistance"— The girl's eyes thanked him.

When they parted it was with a low bow and a mutual, if unspoken, wish that they might meet again, and a few nights later at a court ball, seeing the girl, Walters made haste to be duly presented in form.

"These balls are such jolly little affairs," he laughed. "Given a letter of introduction or two and they will invite even a poor musical student like myself. And how do you find Dresden? Have you 'done' the green vaults, the galleries and so forth? No? Fancy."

"Father does not care much for ordinary sightseeing," declared the girl. Walters eyed her rather doubtfully.

"If I might be permitted to take you around a bit," he suggested. "It would be a great pleasure. Oh, may I really?" As the girl nodded. "Let's start tomorrow."

Such was the beginning of their friendship, and as the days drifted into spring there were little excursions up the river to be made, lingerings on the Bruehl-Terrasse listening to the band in the garden on the other bank; long hours spent in the galleries with pauses before the Sistine Madonna or some other treasure in that wonderful storehouse of art. Then suddenly one day Mr. Hoffman awoke to the fact that his daughter, although but seventeen, was no longer a child. Realizing that this prolonged companionship with an earnest young musician might prove dangerous to one, if not to both, he took passage back to America, and tonight he and his daughter were to leave for Bremen. This was goodby.

"MILLICENT! IS IT REALLY YOU?"

"Adelaide," sang the voice, putting into the song all that the singer dared not say, and the girl trembled responsively. With a final harmony the melody stopped. Through the door the accompanist slipped away. Mr. Hoffman turned to the window. The girl held out both hands.

"Goodby," she murmured. Walters, shaken, leaned forward.

"You will not forget?" he begged. And the girl smiled, a slow loyal smile.

"I will not forget."

As the train rolled its way through the night the girl's eyes filled again with tears, the facile tears of youth, which turn so quickly to rainbows as hope rosily spans the years. Then, clasping a little blue ring and a cluster of forgetmenots, she fell asleep.

* * * * * * *

The windows of Cliff Towers were brilliant with lights. Strains of music floated out to the watchers in the street. Mrs. Livingston was "at home," and Bellevue avenue was crowded with arriving guests and curious spectators.

The band on the lawn began to play "Wine, Women and Song," and the beautiful Miss Hoffman stepped through the long French windows upon the terrace.

The shimmer of moonlight on the water was exquisite. What did it and the music seem to recall? Ah, Dresden! The girl shivered. How long it was since she had thought of Dresden! The man beside her started apprehensively.

"Are you cold? Shall I bring you a wrap?" he asked. She assented.

She wished to be rid of him to think for a moment. Dresden! Walters' face, his happy, boyish, half boastful talk, struggled into her thoughts. "Wait until I sing in the Metropolitan," he had laughed.

And now? Should he make his debut there she would be in her box, tiara crowned. But she would throw him some flowers in memory of the little ring now crushed and broken, with a faded spray of forgetmenots, far back in a drawer of her desk. For a moment the girl's face showed hard and cynical in the moonlight.

There was a stir within the house. The prelude of a song came to her. Then a rich tenor voice broke into the refrain "Adelaide, Adelaide." A famous tenor was singing and the girl's eyes dimmed. "Adelaide!" A step sounded behind her. She turned to see Renshaw, her lace scarf in his hand. Something in his expression warned the girl that the crisis which she had so long been evading could be postponed no longer. Her decision must be made. He was young, rich, good looking. Why could she not care for him? Had she not hoped for this, tried for this? Was it not expected of her? Her breath quickened and she lifted her head. Well, he should have his answer.

* * * * * * *

The morning was clear, but cold, and on the crowded ferryboat only two people, a man and a woman, dared brave the forward deck. The woman showed lines of suffering and self reliance in her face and a great sweetness. The man, wrapped in a heavy coat, was humming to himself, "Adelaide, Adelaide." He breathed, and the woman, with a sudden start, turned. Recognition leaped to both pair of eyes.

"Millicent! Is it really you? How I have searched for a trace of you!" he cried. "But at your former home they only said that you had gone." The girl flushed under his look.

"After father died I had to leave New York," she said simply. "I have been doing typewriting, proofreading, what I could get. You know I am poor."

"You!" cried the man again. "You! Typewriting! And I! Well, I have not made the Metropolitan and probably never will now. Some of the old dreams are lost. But for the rest—what little success I have won has been due to you. Always it has been the thought of you that has spurred me on. It has always been your eyes, Millicent, do you remember the old days? Can we go back to them? Must all the dreams go, or have you forgotten?" There was a note of entreaty in his voice, and the girl's color deepened; then she smiled back at him.

"One can never go back. But perhaps one can start afresh," she answered. "And I have never forgotten."

ANCIENT BURIALS.

A cemetery belonging to a garrison of Longobards has been found near Ascoli, on the Tronto, at a pass across the Apennines, in Italy. The site of the fort is the top of an island of rock now occupied by a little hamlet called Castel Trosino. All the warriors were laid with their faces to the east. Near the head was found a comb made of horn or bone and a round shield with iron boss. On the right lay a long, straight iron sword in a scabbard of hide. Against the right shoulder was laid a long wooden spear and on the left a dagger in a highly ornamented sheath, decorated with gold, as well as a bow and arrows in a quiver.

Generally there was present the buckle of a broad belt, often decorated applique for belt and scabbard, fashioned of gold, silver or bronze. Small gold plates seem to have been sewed to the coat in the shape of a cross. One grave contained a heavy cuirass of plates bound together with iron wire. The horsemen had big shears for clipping manes and a large bronze feed trough with two movable handles. Often bits, saddles and harness were laid beside the dead.

By the women were worn gold hairpins with rounded flat heads, gold earrings of different shapes, finger rings and gold plates. One ring has the names Gerontius and Regina engraved on it. Crosses and necklaces of gold and beads of glass, silver bracelets, pottery vases and plates of glass, cups, combs and other articles of the toilet accompany the remains of women.

Some Sources of Headache.

Among the many things that produce headache are long continued straining of the eyes, sudden excitement, bad air and want of ventilation, alcoholic drinks and a variety of other causes. Another fruitful source of headache in men is the absurd fashion of hats which society now imposes. Tight boots and shoes will also cause headache and destroy comfort of motion and happiness. They prevent the flow of blood to the extremities and cause slight congestion of the brain. Tea drinking is often an unsuspected cause of headache, causing, as it does, exhaustion of the nervous system, and coffee the same thing.

Ministers' Babies.

Mrs. Brown said 't if they was to go on a vacation trip now was a very good time, 'cause the baby was a year old, 'n' I said I c'd agree with her there, 'cause if we waited till next summer the baby might be only a month old or maybe only a week old, for I must say 't so far 's my observation 's extended there never is no countin' on how old a minister's baby 's goin' to be 't any given time.—"Susan Clegg and Her Friend, Mrs. Lathrop," by Anne Warner.

COMPENSATION.

All Things Are to Be Had if One Will but Pay the Equivalent.

Life consists almost wholly of buying, selling, paying. There are no gifts, nothing that does not call for an equivalent. If we cannot pay for gifts in kind we must pay in gratitude or service or we shall rank as moral bankrupts.

If I would have a good situation I must pay for it not only in labor, but in promptness, intelligence, faithfulness and good manners. If I would have good service I must pay not only in money, but in consideration, recognition, appreciation, fairness. I can hold no one to me if I misuse him.

All things are to be had for the buying. Would you have friends? Then pay the price. The price of friendship is to be worthy of friendship. The price of glory is to do something glorious. The price of shame is to do something shameful.

Friendship, glory, honor, admiration, courage, infamy, contempt, hatred, are all in the market place for sale at a price. We are buying and selling these things constantly as we will. Even beauty is for sale. Plain women can gain beauty by cultivating grace, animation, pleasant speech, intelligence, helpfulness, courage or good will. Beauty is not in the features alone; it is in the soul also.

Good will buys good will, friendliness buys friendship, confidence begets confidence, service rewards service, and hate pays for hate, suspicion for suspicion, treachery for treachery, contempt for ingratitude, slovenliness, laziness and lying.

We plant a shrub, a rosebush, an orchard, with the expectation that they will pay us back. We build roads, mend harness and patch the roof with the same expectation. We will trust even these unconscious things to pay their debts.

Some of our investments are good and some are bad. The good qualities we acquire—moderation, industry, courtesy, order, patience, candor—are sound investments. Our evil institutions and habits are bad investments, involving us in losses. We become debtors to them, and they are exacting creditors, forcing payment in full in money and labor and sometimes in blood, agony, tears, humiliation or shame.—From "Balance: The Fundamental Verity," by Orlando J. Smith.

MAN AND THE HORSE.

Animal Conquest Marked One of the Epochs In Civilization.

The conquest of the horse by man and its final utilization for all purposes which are discharged by steam and electricity today marked one of the great turning points in the history of civilization. In the great earth and sand preglacial deposits of Europe the true wild horse is as widespread, though not as varied, as in America. It is not at this stage associated with the remains of man, because no preglacial man except the pithecanthropus or trinil man of Java has been found. In the interglacial or postglacial period the remains of man and the horse are first found together. The first association occurs in the middle of the paleolithic or rough implement period. The discovery of all the possible uses of the horse came very gradually, however, for there is abundant proof that man first hunted and ate, then drove and finally rode the animal.

The prevailing drawings of the paleolithic horse represent him as hog maned, with no forelock to conceal the low bred Roman nose. A second type in the Mouthe cave, a bearded horse with long, bristling mane, long ears and convex forehead, is regarded by M. Riviere as another species. But it is not clear to my mind that these drawings represent more than the summer and winter coats of the same animal. Besides these Roman nosed types, to which Ewart traces the modern cart horse, there are others with small heads and flat noses, which Ewart associates with the Celtic pony and possibly with the origin of the thoroughbred. Other cave drawings, reproduced by M. Capitan, leave little doubt that the ass was known in Europe. It is also certain from abundant evidence in the caves of France that there was a larger horse toward the south perhaps, while the smaller breeds may have frequented the colder northern regions.—Century.

Cured Consumption.

Mrs. B. W. Evans, Clearwater, Kan., writes: "My husband lay sick for three months. The doctors said that he had quick consumption. We procured a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup, and it cured him. That was six years ago. Since then we have always kept a bottle in the house. We cannot do without it. For coughs and colds it has no equal." 25c, 50, $1.00.

Eyes as a Sign of Intellect.

Generally the special point of difference between unimportant and remarkable people lies in their eyes, in the clear, steady, piercing gaze which is able to subdue or terrify the beholder, writes Lady Violet Greville in the Graphic. Sir Richard Burton's look could never be forgotten; neither, I imagine, could Napoleon's or Victor Hugo's or that of any other great man. The eye is the window of the brain, and through it shines the intelligence.

Best Liniment on Earth.

Henry D. Baldwin, Supt. City Water Works, Shullsburg, Wis., writes: "I have tried many kinds of liniment, but I have never received much benefit until I used Ballard's Snow Liniment for rheumatism and pains. I think it is the best liniment on earth" 25c, 50c, $1.00.

Thanksgiving.

Another day of thanksgiving has come and gone, and a thousand voices have been raised in praise and a thousand anthems have gone up—rejoicings of a chosen people for the blessings conferred upon them during the past year. The Nation has had peace and enjoyed prosperity. No dread war has thinned our ranks, but we have increased our prestige among nations and are making vast strides into the commercial activity of the world. We are to be thankful for all this, and for the re election of President Roosevelt, whose policy will make possible the continuance of our prosperity and the increase of our prestige. We in California have much to be thankful for. We stand upon the threshold of the commercial world, and hold the key thereto. The promised land lies to the west, and we in California are in direct touch with golden opportunities. Not only commercially are we favored, but in the enjoyment of such climatic conditions as are ours. Thanksgiving time in California is Spring-like in its beauty. The sunshine and green grass and golden poppies do not savor of Winter's approach.

The Nation and the State can rejoice, but it is hard indeed for the individual who has suffered, to rejoice in a Thanksgiving which seems to mock at his grief. They who have suffered bitter loss must need be stoics or pessimists. What of the relatives of the victims of such railway disasters as that of Eden in Colorado, of such calamities as the burning of the Slocum in New York harbor. Shall they be thankful and observe holiday? Perhaps they should, for it is a wondrous solace to feel that nothing has been so bad that it might not be worse. Let the stricken ones give thanks for this. Yes, they should. It is the only philosophy for those who must live and suffer. If we held the secret of life and death, all might be different. As life is and as we know it, there is nothing left for us to do but to feel the stern truth that no matter how great the calamity, it might have been more terrible.

To be a pessimist is to curse one's self; to cry is vain; to shut out all hope; to blight the lives about you. Be a stoic. It is the only way.

IT developed at the Sonoma Valley Womans' Club meeting Saturday that there is some doubt whether or not the old Mission properties purchased by William R. Hearst will be accepted by the State when Hearst offers to turn them over at the meeting of the Legislature. It is to be hoped that our legislative body will be imbued with enough true California spirit to appreciate the value of the old Missions. They have a historical value. They have a sentimental value, and we owe it to the rising generations to preserve them.

THE finger of circumstance points at Adolph Weber, the Auburn youth who is charged with the murder of his mother, father, sister and brother. It was an awful crime, and thrice dreadful if committed by a son and brother. There are many criminals and degenerates in the world, but when the instinctive tie between offspring and parent is lacking, the individual must needs be degenerate. He is worse than the animal, for even the lion and the tiger fights for its own.

Nicolini Kills Coyote Under the Table.

Florindo Nicolini killed a large coyote on Monday at his house on the ranch, where the "varmint" had taken refuge under a table after being chased in by Nicolini's dogs. He will forward the skin and pelt to the County Clerk shortly and receive the five-dollar bounty paid by the county for coyotes.

"SAVED MY LIFE"

—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does it does through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

We will send you a sample free.

AUTOMOBILE CAUSES FATAL ACCIDENT

T. S. Glaister Fatally Hurt and His Daughter, Mrs. Wagner, Injured.

Last Saturday morning about 10 o'clock as T. S. Glaister, one of Sonoma Valley's oldest and highly respected residents was driving toward town with his daughter, Mrs. Otto Wagner, their team took fright at an automobile, and running away threw them out. Mr. Glaister was badly injured, and passed away Thursday as a result of his injuries. Mrs. Wagner had her arm broken, besides receiving numerous cuts and bruises.

The runaway took place at a dangerous point on the Napa road, which is narrow and steep. The horse, which was considered gentle, became unmanageable upon the approach of the big red touring car, and dashing down the grade threw Mr. Glaister and his daughter out. The automobile occupants immediately came to the rescue, and while they were lending their assistance Dr. E. Z. Hennessey appeared on the scene in his automobile. He was coming from Napa to see a patient here, and his timely discovery of the victims of the accident was most propitious. He is the family physician of the Glaisters, and at once gave his attention to their injuries. With the assistance of the other automobilists he succeeded in getting Mr. Glaister and daughter to their home, where he ministered further to their needs.

It was feared that Mr. Glaister, who was 79 years of age, was internally injured, and for several days his life hung in the balance. His hip was dislocated, and he had several internal hemorrhages. The end came on Thursday, when at 3 o'clock in the afternoon he passed away at his home. Mrs. Wagner is still feeling badly as the result of her experience, and she will be laid up with her broken arm for some time to come.

The accident was a shock to the valley, and the bereaved ones have the sympathy of the entire community.

Mr. Glaister had lived in Sonoma Valley for thirty five years, and has been very active in Masonic, school and church work. He was born in England in 1825, and in 1849 married Mrs. Elizabeth Metcalfe. Mr. Glaister early mastered the shipbuilders' trade. He was quite liberally educated. In 1849 with his wife he came to the United States and located in Chicago, where he entered a drug store as a clerk. In 1854, in New York City, he learned photography, and full of adventure he then sailed for Australia, where he followed photography as a profession until 1869, when he came to California.

His eldest child, Skelton, died in Australia in 1877, but his daughter, Mrs. Wagner and three grandsons, Skelton and Middleton Glaister and Rudolph Wagner, survive him, and reside in this valley.

He was a man of sterling worth and integrity of character. The poor and the rich alike valued his friendship. He was beloved and respected by all who knew him, and his journey through life, though ended, has not been in vain. He has made for himself a monument in the minds and memories of men.

Let the bereaved ones not forget what Seneca has said in his Epistles: "This day which thou fearest so much, and which thou callest thy last, is the birthday of an eternity."

The funeral will take place tomorrow (Sunday) at 12 o'clock, from his late residence. "Green Oaks."

Wants to Be Guardian of Child.

Mrs. Jessie M. Schumacher filed a petition on Tuesday in Santa Rosa requesting that she be appointed guardian of her minor child, Arzola Lee Alleman. The child inherits some real estate and personal property from her late father, Jacob Alleman. The final account in his estate was also filed with the Clerk of the Court. Jessie Schumacher, formerly wife of deceased, is administratrix of the estate, which consists of 160 acres of land in the valley and personal property, all of which is equally divided between her and her daughter, Arzola Lee Alleman.

Woodmen of the World Give Entertainment.

Professor Virgil Alonzo Pinkley gave an elocutionary medley at Union Hall last night, for the benefit of Bear Flag Camp, Woodmen of the World.

A large crowd was present, and greatly enjoyed the program, which showed the wonderful talent and versatility of the performer.

GLEN ELLEN
By Chappie.

Mrs. O. Gordenker spent Sunday in Sonoma.

Judge Gibson spent Tuesday at the county seat.

Mrs. C. J. Poppe and daughter Amy visited San Francisco last Saturday.

Invitations are out for an "at home" to be given by Rev. and Mrs. Cherrington, December 1st.

L. Justi shipped 475 pounds of dressed turkeys to Berkeley and San Francisco last Tuesday.

Mr. Frank Heard of Geyserville spent Thanksgiving with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Heard.

Mr. Mike Gordenker, who is in San Francisco learning to be a machinist, spent Sunday with his parents.

Miss Emma Gaige, Miss S. Cornish and Howard Gaige attended the dance at Sonoma Wednesday evening.

Miss Ella Monahan, who has been visiting the Misses Staley in Santa Rosa, has returned to her Glen Ellen home.

Miss Davidson, the popular teacher of Dunbar school, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. Freemont Tuesday evening.

Miss Emma Gaige, who is attending the University at Berkeley, is at home spending Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Gaige.

Miss Carrie Lemoine, who is attending the Young Ladies' Seminary at San Rafael, came up Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving with her parents, at one of Glen Ellen's prettiest and most modern homes.

"Pienta," the old and well known horse of Judge Gibson, was run over and killed by the Southern Pacific train last Sunday morning. Although an old animal, he was worth half a dozen now a day young ones. Old-timers here looked upon "Pienta" as an old landmark, and will always regret that he should have met with such a tragic death.

Miss Nellie Gordenker is being much entertained by the prominent Russians of San Francisco. On several occasions she has been one of a party entertained aboard the Russian cruiser Lena, and has received much attention from the officers of that ship. Miss Gordenker is a pretty girl, of unusual charm of manner, and is highly thought of by her many friends and acquaintances in this valley.

The Womans' Improvement Club of Glen Ellen will give a ball on Friday evening, December 16th, at Mervyn Hall, and it will be the swellest affair held in Glen Ellen for some time. All the prominent ladies of Glen Ellen are interested in it, and they will be much in evidence at the party. Mrs. C. C. O'Donnell is to be door keeper, and there will be young lady floor managers, among whom will be the popular Misses Monahan and the Thompson girls. Dancing will begin at 8 o'clock sharp.

Mrs. A. Nickerson Secures Divorce Decree.

Mrs. Arlette Nickerson has been granted an interlocutory decree of divorce from Robert Nickerson, to whom she was married in 1883. Judge Seawell intimated that Mrs. Nickerson might change her mind before the year for entering the final decree was up, but the lady stated that her erstwhile husband would have to change his ways somehow, or she would never change her mind. Mrs. Nickerson's grounds for divorce was failure to provide. She stated on the stand that at the time she married Nickerson in St. Louis he was a racehorse man, and followed the races over the country. She accompanied him until his winnings dwindled down, and for economy she finally had to stay at home, while he continued his sporting at the race tracks. His fortunes then rose. He stopped at the best hotels and dressed in the swellest fashion, while she was not in it. For the past three years she maintained that her husband had not spent a month in her company, and has neglected to send her money for herself and child. Seventeen months have gone by since she has received a remittance. The testimony of the plaintiff was corroborated by Mrs. Mary Connors, and Judge Seawell ordered the decree entered.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is Pleasant to Take.

The finest quality of granulated loaf sugar is used in the manufacture of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the roots used in its preparation give it a flavor similar to maple syrup, making it quite pleasant to take. Mr. W. L. Roderick of Poolesville, Md., in speaking of this remedy, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with my children for several years, and can truthfully say it is the best preparation of the kind I know of. The children like to take it, and it has no injurious after effect. For sale by R. G. Shoults.

WOMANS' CLUB DISCUSS BAZAAR

Meeting Saturday Taken Up With Reports and Coming Baby Show.

The Sonoma Valley Womans' Club met last Saturday afternoon, and was well attended. Mrs. Robt. Hill presided. After the minutes of the last meeting had been read and approved, a communication was read from Professor Kenny of Petaluma, asking the privilege to furnish costumes for the mask ball to be given the last evening of the bazaar. The Secretary was ordered to communicate with him further, to see what arrangements could be made to have a costumer here that evening.

The various sections of the Club were called on to report. Miss Minnie Cook, the Chairman of the Forestry Section, reported that she had entered into a contract with Jack Gottenberg to plant, care for and replace, if necessary, a number of trees an our leading streets until January 1st.

Mrs. Wagnon reported for the Plaza Section, stating that the Plaza had been plowed for Bermuda grass, which will be set out upon its arrival from Sacramento.

The Library Section reported an addition of a number of new books, and Mrs. Hill called the Club's attention to the fact that the Womans' Club of San Jose had an excellent traveling library which they were anxious to place, and which the Sonoma Club could get if they wished.

Mrs. G. H. Hotz, who was a delegate to the Palo Alto convention, read a pleasing report of the session.

Mrs. Hill read the report of the Sonoma Valley Womans' Club as presented to the convention, and it was a splendid account of the work being done by the local organization. Mrs. Hill spoke of the excellent impression the report made on many of the State Clubs, who were surprised to find Sonoma heading the Club list for such active and interesting work.

It was decided to charge an admittance of 25 cents for the first two evenings of the bazaar. The matinee charge will be 15 cents and the mask ball tickets 50 cents each. Miss Minnie Cook is to conduct the program for the opening matinee and first evening performance. The program will consist of juvenile numbers. The baby show will be held on the first afternoon, and the baby receiving the largest number of votes will be awarded a handsome doll. Miss Doris Clewe and Mrs. B. F. Campbell were commissioned to buy the prize doll.

Mrs. Wagnon, Mrs. L. Quartaroli and Mrs. A. Bates were the Committee of Arrangements appointed by the President to arrange for the festivities. It was decided that all the Club members should give a dressed doll for the show.

Further discussion of the bazaar was postponed until the next meeting, when a full attendance is hoped for.

A large number from here attended the Y. M. I. ball at Sonoma Wednesday evening, and all reported having a good time.

Ralph Ent, the well known dog man, was in Petaluma Tuesday, looking after several thoroughbred dogs that he has in that place.

Captain Fillgate of San Francisco is registered at the French Cottage. Mr. Fillgate was Captain of the League of the Cross Cadets during the encampment at Glen Ellen several years ago.

A. W. Weaver left for San Francisco Wednesday, where he will take in the polo races. Mr. Weaver is a great follower of these races, and if he stays with it, no doubt will be a millionaire some day, as he has the proper taste.

A large crowd turned out at the Carmer race track Saturday to see two of El Verano's thoroughbred race horses compete against one another. The horses were ridden by A. Landucci, a young jockey from San Francisco, and young Rossi, a home jockey. The race was exciting. The horses were Red Bell and White Flyer. The race was hotly contested for three heats. The winner was White Flyer, ridden by Rossi. A number of races will be run on this new race track, which will be put in better shape; and we hope it will be soon, as it made the town lively for a while.

ORLANDO SOLDATE FATALLY SHOT

While Out Hunting His Gun Was Accidentally Discharged, Killing Him.

Orlando Soldate, well known here and a resident of Petaluma, accidentally killed himself while out hunting at Salmon creek on Monday afternoon. While putting his gun into the rig he was driving it accidentally went off, inflicting terrible wounds about Soldate's neck. Death was instantaneous.

Deceased leaves a wife and mother. He was raised at Carneros Creek, and often visited here.

Mr. Soldate was buried from his late home on Liberty street in Petaluma on Wednesday at 2 o'clock. Deceased was thirty years old, and three years ago was married to Miss Lena Struve of Napa. The young wife was waiting supper for her husband when word came that he was shot. Not until later did she learn the awful truth of his death.

Fair Rach Leased to the Sartoris'

Victor Sartori and I. Sartori have leased the Fair ranch for a period of five years. The property comprises 3689.79 acres, and the rental is fixed at $32,285.70, payable in equal semi-annual installments, in advance. The lessors are not to be called upon to make any improvements for five years, and the right is retained to have a boat and railway landing on the place. The lessors have also the privilege of granting railway rights through the land or maintain a railroad themselves. The lease can be terminated after the third year if the lessors sell the land, by giving one year's notice in advance to the lessees.

Conductor Crane and Wife Celebrate Anniversaries.

Conductor and Mrs. L. Crane, formerly of Glen Ellen, but now of San Rafael, celebrated the twenty-second anniversary of their marriage, and Mr. Crane's birthday, on Saturday night last. The celebration took place in the handsome new San Rafael home of the Crane's that has but recently been completed, and a large number of guests and fellow employees of Mr. Crane were entertained.

Thanksgiving in Sonoma

Thanksgiving in Sonoma was celebrated by union services in the Congregational Church Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The Rev. R. L. Rowe, pastor of the Methodist Church, preached an eloquent sermon, and there was a large attendance. At most of our homes there were turkey dinners and a gathering of the near and dear ones at the board. Turkeys were plentiful, and ranged in price from 20 to 25 cents per pound.

On Thanksgiving Eve the Y. M. I. held their annual ball.

The Eyes of Cupid

By KEITH GORDON

Copyright, 1904, by Mary McKeon

"Give me a sensible girl," said Billy as he unconsciously began to respond to Mrs. Jack's artful promptings of the last half hour, which had, however, been so deftly administered that he did not so much as suspect that he was being pumped dry on the subject of his ideal woman. "Give me a girl with no nonsense about her."

He paused impressively and stared dreamily into the haze of blue smoke that surrounded them as if striving to call his ideal clearly up before his mind's eye.

"Venus de Milo waist and common sense shoes?" suggested Mrs. Jack, who for reasons of her own wished to get the outer semblance of Billy's ideal woman clearly impressed upon her memory.

Billy's glare withdrew itself from the shadowy haze and rested upon his friend's wife. For a brief moment his taste wavered, deflected by the bewitching thinness of her daintily shod foot, which had an apologetic air of being more ornamental than useful. Then he reverted sternly to his ideal once more.

"Er—yes," he began—"that is, if it is necessary," he added weakly, finding his companion's appearance fatally antagonistic to his theories.

As she had explained to her husband while dressing for dinner that evening, she felt responsible for Billy, and, though the former had assured her that Billy was a "husky brute" and could take care of himself, she had not been convinced.

"I took you away from him," she had argued with soft persistence, "and of course he must be awfully lonely up there in the old rooms. It isn't as if he had you," she had ended, with an inflection that had caused her husband, who was at the moment deftly manipulating his hairbrushes, to flash a half humorous glance at his image in the mirror and then cross the room to her side.

With an orange wood stick in one hand and the finger tips of the other rosy with pomade, she had reached up and recklessly pulled his head down beside her own. Temporarily the lonely Billy had been forgotten. Then the very excess of their happiness had made her heart smite her.

"It must be awfully lonely for him," she had resumed as if their conversation had received no interruption, "and since it's all my fault I feel as if I ought to find him a wife."

Now, encouraged by Mrs. Jack's sympathetic, questioning eyes, Billy rambled on, explaining that, though he was not a marrying man, there were moments when he hoped that some time he might have a hearth of his own, etc. Though apparently listening with sweet interest, his hostess was in reality reviewing the list of her friends in search of the possible girl. One by one they seemed to pass before her, a smiling, teasing procession of blonds and brunettes. But none of them, she realized with some disappointment, could exactly be described as a "girl with no nonsense about her," and from the fervor of Billy's convictions it was apparent that no other need apply.

Then, just as two worried lines of thought began to appear on her smooth forehead and as Billy was winding up with, "You see how it is, Mrs. Jack—the girls of today are too brilliant and worldly for a humdrum fellow like me!" the face of Virginia Blair arose before her, and the lines disappeared in the radiance of a bright, assured smile.

"She certainly is good looking in a dreadfully noble manner," the young matchmaker thought to herself as she revolved schemes for bringing the two together, "but I suppose Billy admires that type. And she doesn't pinch her feet or her waist. Obviously she was made for Billy."

At the dinner party which she gave soon after for that particular though unexpressed purpose of bringing them together Billy took Miss Blair out. She was a tall, handsome girl, with dark, serious eyes and smooth, heavy hair. Before the first course had disappeared Billy had discovered that she and life took each other seriously, and he had an uncomfortable feeling when her serious gaze fell upon him that he was a trivial soft of fellow after all. When she asked for his views upon municipal reform, he was sure of it. He was as confused and nonplused as if a canary bird had suddenly begun to bark.

For years he remembered that dinner with a sort of horror. He and Miss Blair, it seemed to him afterward, had worked like galley slaves, discussing all the knotty problems of the day. Around them were lightness, gayety and laughter, especially on the other side of the table, where Tessie Loring, who was the very embodiment of feminine frivolity, bubbled and dimpled and cast languishing glances about her.

Mrs. Jack had often wondered whether there would be anything left of Tessie should the dainty gown, hats, shoes and veils be swept away, for she seemed nothing more than a spirit born of a collection of filmy garments.

"Swish of silk, flutter of lace, odor of violets, flash of eyes and teeth and eternal chatter!" Mrs. Jack summed up ungraciously as she keenly noted Billy's wandering glances. "What possessed me to include her in a party for the benefit of a man who likes sensible girls! I can see that he's growing so disgusted that he wants to escape the entire sex." And with a shade of suppressed annoyance she rose, formulating an intention to keep Tessie as far as possible from Mr. Staunton for the rest of the evening.

It seemed, therefore, almost too unfortunate that the two should happen to meet again at her house late one afternoon of the following week, having been moved to make their bread and butter call at the same hour of the same day.

Tessie was at her best—or worst—and rattled away in the patois of society in a manner that would have been appalling had it been less picturesque. Billy's face was a study, but whatever his thoughts were his attention was unmistakable. Not one of Tessie's glances—sometimes merry, sometimes coquettish and sometimes brimming with a babyish sweetness intended to make him feel how big and strong and different he was—failed of its mark. Tessie did not know much, but that what she knew she knew remarkably well was slowly borne in upon Mrs. Jack during that half hour.

When the distant thud of the front door at last proclaimed her departure from the premises Billy, who had outstayed her, burst into an uncontrollable guffaw, in which his hostess joined him somewhat ruefully. But the outburst was not followed by any of the caustic remarks that might have been expected from a bachelor of his views and standing. On the contrary, a genial, amused gleam lingered in his eyes, the amusement of a grownup with a dainty, foolish, attractive child.

"Tessie is such a silly little thing," observed Mrs. Jack apologetically, "you mustn't mind her."

"Mind her!" ejaculated her visitor warmly. "I should say not! She's great!" And he chuckled reminiscently.

But on the subject of Miss Blair Mrs. Jack found him unresponsive.

"Do you suppose he's interested and doesn't want to show it?" she demanded of Jack, that fountain of wisdom, at the dinner table. "Because Virginia's precisely the sort of girl he pretends to admire. Now that I've found his ideal for him he doesn't seem to appreciate her."

Her husband laughed at the chagrin in her voice.

"If he doesn't fall in love with the lady we've provided"—

"According to his plans and specifications," giggled his wife.

"According to his own plans and specifications—why, I'll punch his head."

But in spite of his opportunities Billy remained cold to the charms of the sensible Miss Blair. In time Mrs. Jack noticed that it became increasingly difficult to throw them together. Billy simply would not be thrown.

"Provide a man with what he pretends to like and he immediately finds out that she doesn't want it," she reflected, with justifiable cynicism. "He says he likes sensible girls, but he won't look at Virginia, though he will hover about that little idiot, Tessie Loring, like a moth about a flame."

And indeed there was plenty of foundation for her statement. Far from causing Billy to take to the woods, as Mrs. Jack had feared she might, Tessie seemed to exercise some subtle influence over him. The two were forever meeting, both at Mrs. Jack's and elsewhere, by the merest chance, of course. And it was noticeable as time went on that, though they arrived separately, they invariably left together.

A month later he came to tell her of their engagement.

"A good many persons misjudge Tessie," he began, as if he felt that she might be one of the number, "but in reality she is one of the most sensible little girls in the world."

He said much more, and Mrs. Jack, swallowing hard, accepted it all, agreeing with him at every point. But when she was alone again she laughed until the tears streamed down her cheeks, and thus her husband found her.

"What under the heavens?" he inquired, but he got no further.

"Billy's going to marry Tessie Loring!" she announced breathlessly. "He says she is so sensible!"

Jack gave a low, incredulous whistle.

"Talk about love being blind!" he blurted out at last. "Why, love has an X ray eye! Nothing short of an X ray could see anything sensible in Tessie."

Saved His Dignity.

One of the chief men in the early history of Weston, Mass., was Francis Fullam, commonly known as Squire Fullam. He was justice of the peace and one of the pillars of the church and on Sundays always sat with his eyes fixed upon the minister as if conscious of being a worthy example to the rest of the congregation. One Sabbath morning during Parson Woodward's sermon an old colored woman in the gallery fell asleep and tumbled off the bench to the floor, making a loud noise. Squire Fullam, who was rather deaf, knew that something unusual had occurred, and, feeling the dignity of his position as justice of the peace, he rose to his feet and called out:

"Stop, reverend sir!"

Mr. Woodward ceased speaking, and the old squire said in stentorian tones:

"If any one has discharged a gun in this meeting house, let him be brought before me tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock."

Some one explained to him the cause of the disturbance, and he added:

"If what I thought had happened, what I said was right. Proceed, reverend sir."

Thereupon Mr. Woodward resumed his discourse, and the service proceeded as usual.

QUEER ALMANACS.

Australian Shepherds Have Odd Ways of Marking Time.

The boundary riders of the great Australian sheep ranches have each a district to look after, in which one must keep the wire fences in repair and see that the sheep come to no harm. It is a hard and lonely life, living, as each boundary rider does, quite alone in the wilderness. A writer tells of some of the curious ways in which these solitary men keep count of the days.

One old man who had lived in the back country for thirty years used two jam tins and seven pebbles. One tin was marked, "This week," and the other "Last week." On Monday morning he would take a pebble from "Last week" and drop it into "This week," and each subsequent morning till "This week" had swallowed the seven. They were returned to "Last week," and the old fellow knew that another Sunday had passed.

Another man had tried and failed with several plans. At last he hit on a new idea. He made a big damper (cake of flour and water) on Sunday night and marked it into seven sections, each section being a day's allowance, so that every time he picked up the damper the grocer would remind him of the day. Unfortunately one Tuesday there came a visitor with a ravenous appetite. The host stinted himself that the hungry one might be satisfied with the day's section. But he wasn't. With anxious eyes the host saw the knife clearing the boundary line and the hungry man ruthlessly carving into his almanac. At last he could stand it no longer.

"Stop, stop!" he cried as he grabbed the damper and glared at it.

"There," he said, "you've eaten Toosday and We'n'day, and now yer wanter slice the best o' the mornin' o' Thursday, an' I won't know the day o' the week."

FROM SOUTH AFRICA,

New Way of Using Chamcerlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. Arthur Chapman writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says; "As a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a cure suitable for old and young, I pen you the following: A neighbor of mine had a child just over two months old. It had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to give it. I suggested that if they would get a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some upon the dummy teat the baby was sucking it would no doubt cure the child. This they did and brought about a quick relief and cured the baby. This remedy is for sale by R. G. Shoults.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The most inexcusable thing in the world is to unjustly abuse a decent citizen.

It doesn't do people any good to be old enough to know better unless they are also too old to enjoy meanness.

Every man needs a chart to tell him the degrees of kinship in his family, but his wife knows them so well she can say them backward.

The truth about some people who seem to be doing so much is that they always put things off until the last minute and then have to rush.

The early bird may get the worm, but the late bird has as good an argument: He gets his rest which the early bird misses and has never yet starved.

Be patient with the girl who takes so long to dress. By and by she will be able to do up the work and dress herself and three or four children in half the time she takes for herself now. —Atchison Globe.

Dangers of Melancholy.

The weak, broken spirited person grows morbid and melancholy, and the brain degenerates rapidly under the influence of these mental states. Melancholia is something that comes more within the province of the will power than anything else. It can be cast off and avoided only in this way. Sometimes for the lack of stimulating the will physicians will recommend a change of occupation, scenery and association. This is merely an attempt to rescue the mind from introspection and give the will an opportunity to assert itself. Sometimes this is accomplished, and then, if followed up by cultivating the will, a permanent cure may be effected.—Exchange.

Constipation.

Health is absolutely impossible, if constipation be present. Many serious cases of liver and kidney complaint have sprung from neglected constipation. Such a deplorable condition is unnecessary. There is a cure for it. Herbine will speedily remedy matters. C. A. Lindsay, P. M., Bronson, Fla., writes Feb. 12, 1902: "Having tried Herbine, I find it a fine medicine for constipation." 50c bottle.

Old Time Controversies.

Old time controversies were often vigorous in language. In a controversy with Milton, concerning the divine right of kings Salmasius called his opponent a puny piece of a man, a homunculus, a dwarf not having a human figure, a bloodless being, a creature of skin and bones, a contemptible pedagogue fit only to flog boys, a rhinoceros, a hangdog looking fellow. The great English poet not only answered in kind, but entered into an extensive correspondence with people in Holland to obtain petty gossip and scandalous anecdotes concerning his opponent.

Neuralgia Pains.

Rheumatism, lumbago and sciatic pains yield to the penetrating influence of Ballard's Snow Liniment. It penetrates to the nerves and bone and being absorbed into the blood, its healing properties are conveyed to every part of the body, and effect some wonderful cures. 25c, 50c, $1.
